Message from the President

Thank you, Adriana. How could I ask for more?

I was really impressed by the turnout last night. As I look at the people in this room, I see one thing in common - you are all incredible. You are the type of attorneys who make the legal profession better. That’s why we love you all and why I am so excited to be President of the Palm Beach County Justice Association (PBCJA).

What’s in store for the PBCJA?

In general, the world is changing and our legal profession is adapting. With regards to the PBCJA, we will be focusing on how our members can give back and be involved in our community. We will also be looking at leadership and making the PBCJA a stronger organization.

Why Outsourcing Makes Sense for Contingency-Based Firms

In today’s fast pace world, contingency-based firms need to focus on the work that will have the biggest impact on their practice. However, there are many tasks that can be done by freelancers, so outsourcing can make sense for law firms. It can also be a good way to free up time for the lawyers to focus on their core competencies.

Preparing Clients for Medical Examination with the Defense Doctor

When preparing clients for medical examinations, it is important to have them complete insurance forms, medical history and physical examinations. This will help in the defense of the case. It is also important to have the doctor attend the examination in person when possible. This will help to prevent any potential problems.

Preparing Clients for the CME

Prior to the CME, your attorney should have you in their office to prepare you, just like preparing for the bar exam. This is important in order to make sure that you understand what will happen during the examination.

Preparing Clients for the CME

Preparing clients for the CME is important in order to make sure that they understand what will happen during the examination. This includes providing them with a list of questions that they may be asked, as well as any other relevant information.

Preparing Clients for the CME

Preparing clients for the CME is important in order to make sure that they understand what will happen during the examination. This includes providing them with a list of questions that they may be asked, as well as any other relevant information.

Preparing Clients for the CME

Preparing clients for the CME is important in order to make sure that they understand what will happen during the examination. This includes providing them with a list of questions that they may be asked, as well as any other relevant information.